HUGS, KISSES, FOR BRITISH WAR BRIDES

The Edinburgh brides were Kelly and Louise. The Edinburgh brides were married last September. The brides were "bunkies" on the U. S. R. New York, flagship of the American Overseas fleet in the Orkneys. The husbands were both first-class, four-year seamen. They met the Edinburgh girls at parties on shore arranged by the British war effort.

President Wilson's first official act on his return from France will probably take place in Boston. It will be the signing of the $6,000,000,000 revenue bill recently passed by Congress.

Port of embarkation officials believe that the Polar Bear is experiencing one of the problems of some MTS. It is a new steel screw vessel of 4,295 gross tons and was built by the Manitowish Emergency Fleet Corporation. She is 100 feet long and has a 100-horsepower engine.

On February 5, the President Grant had 1,760 officers and enlisted men on board.

Secretary Tumulty will leave Washington tomorrow night for Boston to meet the President. He is bringing the measure with him, and it is expected that the President will sign it as soon as he reaches his hotel.

It has been pointed out that if President Wilson's condition results in the postponement of consideration of certain important peace problems President Wilson may defer his return to France.

Wilson Sends Radio of Sympathy to Clemenceau

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

On Board the U. S. S. George Washington with President Wilson en Route to the United States, Feb. 29.—(By Wireless).—President Wilson sent the following message of condolence over the attempt on Premier Clemenceau's life:

"Secretary of State Lansing,
American Peace Commission,
Paris.

"Please convey to M. Clemenceau my heartfelt sympathy and my joy at his escape. I sincerely hope that the report that he was only slightly injured is altogether true. I was deeply shocked over the news of the attack.

"Drys" Plan to Make no Invasion of the Home

By International News Service.
Washington, Feb. 20.—"A man's home is his castle." That is the view of Wayne B. Wheeler, counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, which "put over" the prohibition amendment.

He was commenting on the action of the Michigan courts, which held unconstitutional the section of the Michigan prohibition law on "search and seizure." "We contemplate no law, national or State, questioning the right of a man's possession of liquor in his own home. Search and seizure legislation is designed only to break up illicit traffic in intoxicants."

IMPERATOR TO BRING SOLDIERS

Seven Other Large German Ships Also Assigned to United States

By International News Service.
Washington, Feb. 20.—All the American troops in France will be returned to the United States before the end of next Summer, if the program now planned by the War Department can be carried out, it was stated this afternoon in an announcement by the War Department that word had been received of the definite allocation to the United States of eight large German ocean-going vessels, including the mammoth Imperator.

"PERSHING TOO BUSY

Rharon, Pa., Feb. 26.—General Pershing is too busy soldiering to think of running for President, according to Colonel Carl Boyd, late aide to the general. In replying to a letter from James Bracken, Republican leader at Greenville, suggesting that Pershing might be a candidate for the presidency, Colonel Boyd wrote, at the general's direction, that John J. is "concerned only with his military duties, and feels that he could not consistently become interested in anything that would divert his

LEARNS SECRET OF THE 'BIG BERTHA'

Universal Service Man Visiting Krupp Works Finds 20,000 Turning Out 800 Cannon

By H. J. GREENWALL.
Exclusive cable to Universal Service and the London Daily Express.
Erfurt, Germany, Feb. 20.—At the first foreign correspondent allowed to visit the famous Krupp gun works, accompanying President Hindenburg, I learned today the secret of "Big Bertha" from Bruno Dier, also a director of the munition plant. When the German made their first push toward J. Calais, on the northern and technical staff of the German gunmakers was concentrated upon building a cannon that could bombard London from the French side of the English Channel. The plan proved a failure.

The German general staff then ordered Dr. Dier to invent a gun powerful enough to bombard Paris, and subsequently he evolved the "Big Bertha" with inter-longitude barrels and two calibers. Information to give me the exact number of such guns built, Dier Hauser admitted that it was between 500 and 600. He said that the British aviators located the main gun positions after their December, but no direct hits were scored.

Krupps turned out 2,500,000 shells a month during the war. There are now employed 32,000 workmen of whom 20,000 are working on armaments for 800 cannon which probably will be delivered to the French.

No Saloons, But Beer May Continue to Flow in New York

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 20.—Now the "case" have turned against the saloons. It is not known whether the premise of the salutation Army to find jobs for all hand-to-hand anything to do with this or not, as evidence there are not going to be any swinging doors, brass rails and white-coated attendants under the light wine and beer law now formulated. It is announced.

The law bill will probably be introduced in both houses Monday night. The new bill, it is said, will provide for the manufacture and sale solely within the confines of New York, of beer containing from 3 to 4 per cent alcohol and light wine containing as high as 10 per cent.

The sale will be provided for, but there will be no saloons as today. There will be no limit to the amount of legalized drinks that one may have in his home under the bill.

BOSTON POLICE FAVOR JOINING THE A. F. OF L.

Is it always the Husband's fault?

Is the wife never to blame? Has a man no right to seek companionship and sympathy when they are missing in his own home? Is Clayton Spencer to be reproached for what he did?

"What do men want, anyway?" Mrs. Haverford had asked. And Audrey, brilliant, audacious, under the impulse of her own hurt, had answered flippantly, cynically: "They want different things at different ages. That is why marriage is such a rotten failure."

Was she right? Must the modern man inevitably outgrow the woman he marries? Can the woman help it?

This is the problem—the great problem of modern married life, which Mary Roberts Rinehart has taken hold of in her latest novel. Fearlessly she portrays this absorbing situation that confronts men and women today.

Clayton Spencer, brilliant, successful, eager for greater achievement—Natalie, beautiful, frivolous, selfish, the wife with whom he had not a thought in common—could there be greater tragedy? Was Clayton Spencer to be denied forever the love and understanding he craved? Could Natalie have satisfied the needs of his deepening years?

And when he finds the woman of his craving—the woman of greater heart and deeper understanding—what? Must he renounce her?

"Dangerous Days" is a novel that every man and woman will want to read. Begin it in the March Pictorial Review today. A regular $1.60 novel complete in three more issues.

DECLARE PUBLIC LIKES JAZZ DANCE BEST

Cameron Sisters Invent Own
Steps Through Hard Work and Patience

By FRED J. McISAAC.

When you see a tall dancer, graceful as a swan, gliding about the stage with the spot following her and illuminating her head smile, you feel that it is very beautiful and poetic, and you don't realize that the poor little thing is probably floating upon a platter.

I got a lot of inside stuff about the dancing business from the Cameron Sisters, preferably afternoon while they were waiting for their number in "Little Simplicity."

I'll let you don't know that each sister uses up three pairs of these pretty little satin slippers per week, and these little slippers cost $2.75 per pair. Just add that up. My arithmetic was always one of my weaknesses.

STUFF TOES WITH WOOL.
And you didn't know that they stuff the toes of their slippers with cotton wool so it won't hurt so much when they get away up on them. Of course you didn't. Think of it next time you see a beautiful toe dancer and give her an extra hand. She is earning it.

The Cameron Sisters are American girls and they learned their business in America. They spent three years in the Metropolitan Opera House, where they were taught all the Italian tricks of toe dancing as well as the Italian style of dancing by Madame-Madame-diat. I'll forget the name of the ballet mistress.

When you interview the Cameron Sisters, Madame-diat does most of the talking, but I really is an attentive listener and chimes in now and then with a pertinent remark. They are always anxious to see "the other" and she declares that the other one is the best of the team.

Are they? "Well, No. They don't look so much alike off the stage. In fact, I am not so sure they are actually sisters, although they insist that they are."

HAVE TO GIVE PUBLIC JAZZ.
"We love classic dancing," explained Madame-diat, "and we are artistic in our ideas as anywhere else, but you have just to give the public a little jazz if you want to do business."

"We notice that we get more applause when we do a soft show dance to jazz music than when we do a classical number. But why, wouldn't our Madame be indignant if she saw us perform in any of the old stuff?"

"Wouldn't she thought?" said Madame-diat. "We design our own costumes," explained Madame-diat, "and we put on our own dances. Our first number, 'Little Simplicity,' was not produced by us, but the other dances are our own."

"How do you produce a dance?" "Oh, we have them play the music for the dance, and if we don't like it we have it changed. When we get music that strikes us as effective we engage a pianist to play it over and over and we try out different ballet days that we haven't run out of them yet, and it is easy to invent dancing steps. Sometimes the music suggests things, it's just a matter of hard work and patience."

DOCTOR DENIES ALIENATION CHARGE

Judge Landon and a jury in the second session of the Superior Court are hearing the $25,000 suit brought by Charles T. Cutter of Boston, formerly of Malden, against Dr. Almon Cooper of No. 114 Park street, Brookline, for alleged alienation of the affections of Mrs. Alva M. Cutter, formerly wife of the plaintiff.

Counsel for the plaintiff told the jury that Cutter, who was a working man, employed Dr. Cooper in 1910 to treat his wife for epilepsy and heart trouble. As a result of the acquaintance thus begun it was claimed that Dr. Cooper alienated the affections of Mrs. Cutter. The latter is now the wife of Dr. Cooper, who secured a divorce from his wife at about the same time Cutter obtained a divorce from his wife.

The answer of Dr. Cooper to the plaintiff's declaration is a general denial, and also that if any act of alienation occurred to Cutter it was more than six years before the suit was brought. The action of Cutter was entered in the Superior Court for Suffolk County on October 15, 1914.

TELLS OF DANGERS TO "SUICIDE SQUADRON"

Newport, R. I., Feb. 20.—"Stick to your job and go to with it," was the slogan of the "Suicide Squadron" of ten mine ships, manned by officers, Boats and men. Captain Reginald Belknap, commander of the first boat, told a large audience in the Armory of the Training Station. He said each mine carried 100 pounds of TNT, a ship carried as high as 500 mines, and the vessels sailed in formation two yards apart. One mine was sufficient to wipe a ship out of existence, and it was only single charges of TNT that nearly blew the ship off the main. He pointed out the danger of the entire fleet being destroyed by troublemaker ships and from an attack by submarines.

WANT IRISH TO VOICE PROTEST ON LEAGUE

Quincy House Meeting Condemns Constitution of World
Alliance

One hundred and fifty members of the Associated Branches of the Friends of Irish Freedom, meeting at the Quincy House, condemned the constitution of the League of Nations as "a complete and perfect instrument to strangle democracy," and adopted a set of resolutions requesting the Irish race convention to be held in Philadelphia on Saturday and Sunday to stir up nation-wide sentiment against the ratification of the constitution of the league by the United States senate.

Patrick J. Larkin, Cornelius Collins and Matthew Cunningham all at the meeting, leave today for Philadelphia, where they will arrange for the reception of the large Massachusetts delegation.

Calvin O'Connell, who is scheduled to speak at the convention is expected to leave Boston Saturday.

Cardinal ribbons is expected at the sessions, as are Governors of five States and a large number of United States Senators.

Returns Home After 27 Years to Claim Part of Estate

After an absence of twenty-seven years, during which his brothers believed he had died and were just about to start proceedings in the courts to have him declared legally dead, Joseph Sullivan has returned to the Irish Grove section of Malden and will share in the estate of $10,000 left by his father.

Sullivan was identified by many Malden people, including Ex-mayor Charles T. Costello, a playmate when they were boys, Sullivan, who was born in Malden, returned home when he was twenty.

The Right Laxative For The Little Ones—

The natural condition of a child is to be happy and cheerful. When the girl grows and is indifferent to a school and study, or the boy is ill and refuses to go to school and play, the child needs a laxative to empty the bowels and set up the liver.

The People Should Have a Say in So Vital a Question

The proposed Constitution of the League of Nations is an astounding document.

We do not wonder that the delegates of England, France and Italy approved it. But we see endless foreign entanglements in it for us.

We do not believe it possible that the people of the United States will ratify a proposed treaty of ALLIANCE—which is all the document really is—that would surrender our sovereignty over our international policies, over our relations with the other States of the two Americas, over many of our domestic affairs, and even over our own army and navy; and that would bind us to participation in all the future quarrels of Europe, Asia and Africa.

It would make the Monroe Doctrine a dead letter. It would be plainly and simply a QUINUPLE ALLIANCE of England, France, Italy, Japan and our country—the exact copy of the QUADRUPE ALLIANCE formed in 1815, with precisely the same objects, and doomed from the beginning to the same miserable failure followed by the same wicked intrigues and wars.

But we are not so much concerned with the character of this proposed alliance as we are with the part the United States is required, by this proposed treaty, to play in that alliance.

Consider what the United States would be pledged to do and to submit to having done to us by this extraordinary treaty.

To begin with, the machinery of the League is to consist of a Congress of Delegates, an Executive Council and a permanent Secretariat—the Congress of Delegates being the superior legislative body. Article 2 provides that each of the high contracting parties shall have but one vote in this body; and Article 7 provides that fully self-governing States, including dominions and colonies, may be admitted to the League as members—by which charming provision Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa may each be admitted as separate self-governing dominions and colonies—with the result that Great Britain would have just five times as many votes in the body of delegates as would our country.

If the Senate of the United States ratifies a treaty binding this country to have only one-fifth the voting power of England in deciding whether we are to go to war or keep the peace, or what the relative naval strength of England and our country shall be, then we should by our own act abandon the principle of America First.

Article 8 provides for reduction of armaments, the naval and military forces which each State will be permitted to maintain to be decided by the executive council, which is to be composed of representatives of this country, the British Empire, France, Italy and Japan, and it is stipulated that in fixing the strength of each State's naval and military armament special regard must be given to each State's "geographical situation and circumstances."

Under this article of the treaty the British, French and Italian representatives, or the British, Italian and Japanese representatives, or the British, French and Japanese representatives, could combine to allot the United States a naval armament inferior to that of either of the four other nations, and could combine to allot England a naval armament superior to that of the United States that we would be helpless against possible British naval attack.

The senator of the United States who votes to subject our country to any such possible inferiority and danger ought to be and we think would be driven from office.

Article 10 would bind the United States to wage either economic or military war, as the Executive Council might decide, in defence of ANY MEMBER OF THE ALLIANCE that may be attacked by an external foe. In other words, we would be forced to participate not in some, but in practically ALL the quarrels and wars that may spring up in Europe, Asia or Africa.

Article 16 provides:

1. That should one member of the alliance go to war with another member in violation of Article 12, the other members—including, of course, our country—shall immediately make war upon the offending party.

2. That "it shall be the duty of the Executive Council in such case to recommend what effective military or naval force the members of the League shall severally contribute to the armed forces to be used to protect the covenants of the League."

3. That the members of the alliance will not only immediately prevent all financial, commercial and personal intercourse between their peoples and the offending State, but will prevent EVERY NEUTRAL COUNTRY NOT A MEMBER OF THE ALLIANCE from having financial, commercial or personal intercourse with the offending State.

We do not hesitate to say that this article is an extraordinary attempt to graft upon the law of nations a provision which is repugnant in every sentiment of justice, and in direct contravention of the whole doctrine of neutral rights of commerce and intercourse upon which we have always insisted, and to defend which we went into this very war.

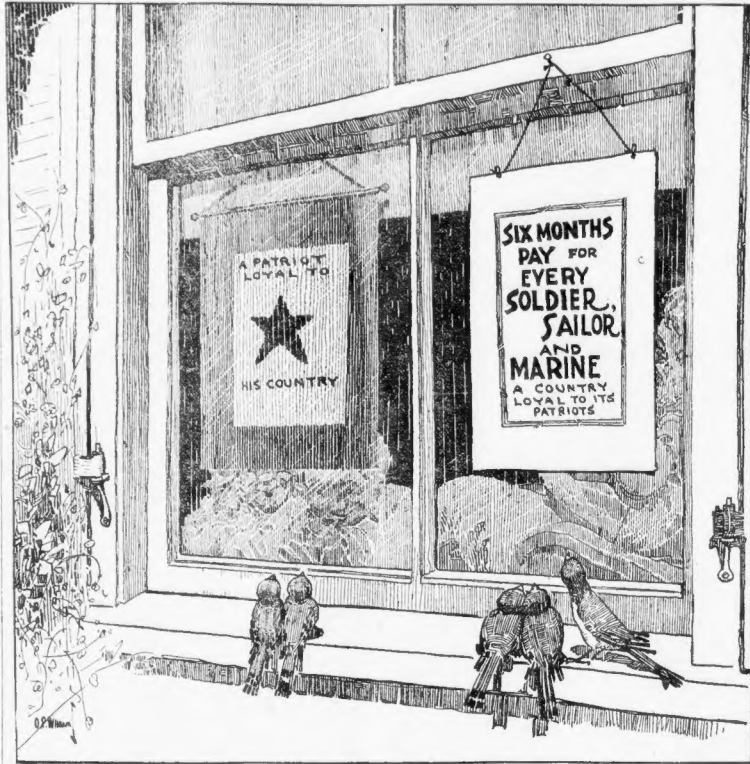

And we say emphatically that if it is just and right for any group of belligerents to resolve that they will deny and end by force the exercise of neutral rights to carry on commerce and communication with belligerents, then we have lost our main justification for making war upon Germany, because our chief—and our rightful—ground for declaring war upon Germany was that Germany forcibly and murderously interfered with and hindered our financial, commercial and personal intercourse with the nations with which Germany was at war.

With what face can we now adopt as a righteous national policy, and write into international law, the same policy which we have just spent billions of money and sacrificed thousands of lives in resisting?

And then, as if to amplify this repudiation of the very rights of neutrals, which we have always held to be sacred, and for which we have fought two wars—the war of 1812 and the war of 1917—Article 17 of this treaty of alliance goes on to decree that the United States shall "join the other members of the alliance in making war upon any State NOT MEMBERS OF THE LEAGUE that may go to war without submitting their dispute to the judgment of the Executive Council of the alliance!"

If the Senate wants any assurance as to what eight Americans in ten will think of this proposed treaty, let the Congress submit the question of ratification or rejection to a referendum vote. And, indeed, we do think that that is exactly what ought to be done.

This thing proposed to us is PRACTICALLY A REVOLUTION. It is a repudiation of all our historical traditions and policies; a creation of representatives and powers wholly unknown to our Constitution and repugnant to its spirit and to its letter; an abdication of our national sovereignty; a surrender of our sovereign rights to arm ourselves according to our own notions of safety; an abandonment of our ancient and precious right to the freedom of the seas and to freedom of intercourse with neutral nations; and a complete relinquishment and repudiation of a policy of non-entanglement in foreign disputes and wars which always has been and STILL IS the cause of our national prosperity, growth and strength—the effectual creator and preserver of our peace, our liberties, our institutions, and the might, dominion and renown of the Republic.

And, senators, when a free people are confronted with a proposal to repudiate ALL THE POLICIES of their glorious past and to embark upon strange policies that may lead to endless perils and wars, and might lead to the destruction of the Republic itself, then such a proposal should be debated by the whole people and decided in no other forum than the forum of the nation itself, by the will of the people, recorded beyond any question or challenge at the ballot boxes, which register the supreme and final decision of a free citizenship.

British Press Opinions on the League of Nations

The London Post says:

"The League does not give an effectual means for preventing war. It at least gives what we hope and trust will be a solid alliance of the five great powers, which is no mean achievement in the cause of peace."

The London Globe says:

"The League presents no harmful features. It constitutes in effect a League of Allies with the inclusion of the United States. So long as these five great powers are banded together in unity no very serious danger is likely to threaten the peace of the world. Their moral as well as their material influence cannot fail to exert a wholesome effect as a deterrent to would-be wrongdoers among the nations of the world at large."

The London Evening News says:

"No man can yet say. All that can be said is that yesterday the sense that something new, something irrevocable had been done pervaded the conference hall. The News also says that: 'the affairs of the world had been lifted into new dimensions, and for a time, at any rate, political ideas have been raised to a higher plane. How long will that last?'"

The Pall Mall Gazette says:

"It is a remarkable and significant fact that fourteen nations, including all the civilized great powers, should have declared their assent to its doctrines and pledged themselves to carry out its intentions. We may heartily echo President Wilson's hope that it will be found to represent a union of wills which cannot be resisted."

The London Evening Standard says:

"The covenant is a document of highly businesslike character approved by the representatives of fourteen nations and destined to modify the whole course of future history."

The Westminster Gazette says:

"Some even of the warmest supporters of the League of Nations will admit that their expectations were too low, in the face of the momentous document, published today. With America, Britain and France going hand in hand and imperative circumstances driving them to produce a scheme which is clear and bold in outline, and which if adopted in anything like its present form will put all international politics on a new basis and give us the leadership of the United States not of Europe only but of the world."

The London Times says:

"Those who thought the League of Nations was only a project of international amity will change their tunes when they read the covenant. They will realize that the conference is in reality earnest and the whole project is nothing less than the civilized great powers, should have declared their assent to its doctrines and pledged themselves to carry out

General Smuts, is like it as its brother.

"The first duty of the League being to prevent war, it must be provided with its thunders, and their efficacy must depend mainly on the physical force at its command. The advantages of membership of the League are these:

"First, every member will have for its territorial integrity and political independence a guarantee of protection against aggression backed by the whole force at the disposal of the other members. The League is, in fact, a mutual guarantee to society of unlimited liability.

"Secondly, where it appeals to the arbitrament of law and observes the rules of the League and another party does not, any member will have the protection of the League against a resulting war. These advantages are solid, and they carry, as they should do, a certain corresponding obligations, such as to observe the rules of the League in regard to the least settlement of disputes by arbitration and to contribute in a degree as determined by the executive to punitive measures decided upon by the League in order to enforce its principles.

"These measures are in the last resort military, but they also may be financial and economic. A very important provision is that these punitive measures shall subject the offending power in severance of all its relations with the nations of any state, whether a member of the League or not, and further that all members shall give the right of passage through their territory to forces acting in behalf of the League.

"It is not, therefore, true, as some said, that the League cannot do more against the offender than the present war. This provision is further significant as a recognition of the principle for which Great Britain fought so hard in the war; that no one has a right to be neutral and gain by that neutrality in a struggle in which the foundations of international society are at stake.

"It is a case for legitimate pride to recognize in the covenant so much of the work of Englishmen. It is again a source of legitimate pride to Englishmen that Article XIX of the covenant might almost be taken as an exact restatement of the principles which the relations of Great Britain with India and the Dominions. But the bounties are if only document recognized as nations before the world is also a fact of profound significance in the history of these relations.

"The League of Nations is not, whatever enemies of the project may say, a cosmopolitan corporation, but the civilization (if only people would see it) of sane and enlightened patriotism and of boundless faith in the future of our own race."

The Manchester Guardian says: "We stand a good chance of getting the League of Nations run by the peoples, but by officials."

Here's Your Salvation Army Doughnuts!

Oh, boy—oh, boy! The doughnut that made the doughnut famous! They ate them on this run, and then they licked the Hun.

MOTHER'S kind aren't in it any more—Salvation Army doughnuts for the doughboys at home as well as abroad! And now mother can make 'em for us give full and complete instructions in next Sunday's Advertiser and American—also recipes for the A. brand of raisin pie, "Biscuits a la General March," "Apple-kiss a la Joffre," "Chocolate a la Chateau-Thierry," "Lakeland Indian pudding a la Marne," "Pumpkin pie a la Belleau Wood," and many another with a reminiscence flavor as well as a historic name.

But, of course, there are other things than doughnuts in next Sunday's Advertiser and American. It's a big menu. There is an interesting discussion of the thirty-six puzzles about airplane rights, which are facing the peace conference arbiters. Where do YOU come in on it—can anyone who likes to eat in your potato patch or apple orchard—and you have nothing to say about it?

Do you like the shape of your nose? If you don't, you know you can change it. Nothing simpler, as an expert reveals in an interesting article next Sunday. The surgeon can make it pure Grecian, if you want it that way—without even cutting the skin.

How innocent little Norma McLeod was held helpless in the thrall of a hypnotist's evil will and made to commit a crime, of which she convinced a learned judge that she was innocent, is a true story, as fascinating as that of the ill-starred "Trill."

Another chapter of that masterly story of George Gibbs, "The Black Room"—love, mystery, adventure, intrigue, war—unfolds the ravages of the white Sahara.

Mrs. Christine Frederick, noted authority on household efficiency, gives some excellent advice on how to make housekeeping easy, and while you may not be starting housecleaning yet, of course, every housewife is starting to think about it.

Some new evening gowns and wraps by Lady Duff Gordon, and "The Beauty of Beauty"—a joy forever!

"Father" gets sweet revenge next Sunday. Even the dog must have an occasional day. And "Boob" dreams of love—and a "famous" museum turn-down. And there are lots of other good things, of course—but for the rest you'll have to read the Sunday Advertiser and American. It's worth it!

China and the Bean

The bean plays an important part in Chinese domestic economy, and one of the specially desired qualifications of the Chinese man, throughout the north and south, is his ability to connect from beans—green, black and yellow—several staple dishes.

The bean soup appears on the Chinese table daily; it is not considered as fit for food until it has been reduced to its essence and put in the form of bean curd, or bean gelatine, which are for sale in every roadside foodshop of northern China.

The art of producing these nourishing foods, which are the most of the poor, is to the rural Chinese woman what the making of butter, cheese and jam is to the domestic housewife. In the large cities bean manipulation of that sort is a craft and a commercial activity, just as the making of jam and butter is in the large cities of the West; but it can scarcely be called an industry, since it is still quite without organization. The bean soup, when crushed, soaked, baked, boiled and strained before the essences appear.

Natural "Cookers"

Maori housewives in New Zealand have discovered, like their more civilized sisters, the value of the fireless "cookers" as a labor saver, but their "cookers" have been made of native materials. Nature furnishes them in inexhaustible supply, for they are nothing more than the small gourds of the region. The women sink the receptacle—a box, a basket or a bag—in the moist mud of the region. They then cook their meals, but they are washing in these baby volcanoes.

Murderers Are Stupid. A Bankrupt World. All But America.

By Arthur Brisbane

(Copyright, 1919.)

Of all the world's misguided inhabitants, murderers are the most stupid.

When the war began there were two great Socialist leaders in France. One, Jaures, exaggerated the power of Socialism, the "solidarity" of workers. He believed that Socialist parties in the different nations were strong enough to prevent war. He was mistaken, and lived to know it.

The other great Socialist leader was Clemenceau, a born fighter, who before the war divided his time between attacks on Jaures and on the "solidarity" of workers. He believed that Socialist parties in the different nations were strong enough to prevent war. He was mistaken, and lived to know it.

Clemenceau knew that war was coming, that the Kaiser would not die, if he could help it, without trying out the great army that had been building up for more than forty years. The war came as he predicted.

In the war's beginning a murderer killed Jaures for being too peaceful. And now with the war ended, another murderer attempts to kill Clemenceau, perhaps for being too combative.

The "reasons" for the murderers' attempt to kill Clemenceau are not known as this is written. This is sure: A murderer exposes his hatred, personal, political or religious, in vain. He sacrifices his own life, if justice gets him, and accomplishes nothing. Nothing was accomplished by the man who killed Jaures. Nothing would have been accomplished by this latest murderer if he had succeeded in killing Clemenceau.

Clemenceau represents the power of the French people. A dozen would be found to take his place, as they would have been found to take the place of Poincaré if he had been killed in battle. Murder does nothing but prove that man is still a savage, with the thinnest possible veneer of civilization.

If a financier and political economist from the planet Mars came here and studied each newspaper, fame leagues, the strikes, pacifists, professors, Bolsheviks, and the rest of it, he might say on his return, if he were a careful observer:

"That young, big neighbor of ours is in serious trouble. People there are divided into groups, calling themselves nations. They have been killing each other off and bankrupting themselves in the process. They have all been borrowing from the richest of them, called America, and happened to stay out of the fight for three years. Now they are struggling, trying to get back on their feet financially and industrially, trying to see how much, if anything they can get from the beaten nations, were bankrupt than they are, and endeavoring politely and tactfully to get as much of the future burden as possible on America, planning to sell to her as much as possible and buy from her nothing, or as little as possible. Combined with this they have a League of Nations to keep on top forever those that are on top now, trying to make peace perpetual, with the world permanently the property of the victors. And in their peace plan there are as many germs of future wars as there are raisins in a cake."

Permanent peace—Can you have it when men at heart are not peaceful? Probably not any more than you could have a permanent, content and all-satisfying, while men are still ignorant, only beginning to learn.

The Chinese Emperor, Yong Lo, successor to Hong Wu, who drove out the Tartars, pacified and consolidated the great empire, started the Ming Ming Period in Chinese civilization and decided that China should be peaceful and happy forever. He couldn't accomplish it.

Yong Lo, when his turn came, made up his mind to get all knowledge in the world together and sell THAT permanent peace. Under his orders the archivists of the empire wrote eleven thousand volumes, said to contain over three hundred million words—a good many to write in Chinese characters. The emperor tells you in his interesting book, "Modern Man and His Forefathers," Long Lo thought he had achieved peace locked in the five hundred million Chinese words, when, as a matter of fact, there wasn't any real knowledge there.
